Daffy Duck

"Fresh up"
Freddie
says:

"RIGHT NOW, you're probably asking yourself—

How does a star football player get a fresh, clean taste?"

"I'm a star football player. I must be—I'm always seeing stars! And I'll tackle anything."

"Wherever the action is—there I am. Right there on the bottom—paving the way for my team. Man! Have I got spirit, and aching bones, and a dry throat!"

"After the game, I'm the hero of the team. I've got the 7-Up!
Seven-Up puts a fresh, clean taste in every dry throat. No wonder we're 7-Up fans!"

See what the cheering's about! Race down the field to the store and fill your football helmet with bottles of sparkling 7-Up. Seven-Up makes your throat feel fresh and clean and good. As "Fresh up" Freddie always says: "Fresh up" with Seven-Up!"

The BACKWARDS BURRO

"Papacito, wake up!" Little Pancho Vanilla called one morning. "The fence ees broken and Wrong-Way Juan, our leetle burro, ees missing!"

"Um—What?" Papacito yawned sleepily. "I wonder why he ran away? We treat heem good."

"Si," Little Pancho nodded, "but last night I heard you tell heem to be a good leetle burro and stay in the field. That was the wrong theeng to say to heem."

"Oh? And why ees that?" Papacito blinked. "Because Wrong-Way Juan does every-thing the opposite of what someone tells heem to do," Little Pancho reminded his father.

"Si, I am always forgetting that," Papacito nodded drowsily and shrugged. "Well, he ees a bothersome animal and hardly worth the trouble of finding."

"But, Papacito," Little Pancho protested, "if we do not find heem, that means you will have to walk into town from now on, and walk to the corn field, and walk . . ."

"Stop!" Papacito pleaded. "Just the thought of all that walking ees making me tired! All right," he sighed, "I suppose we will have to go and search for heem after all."

And so Little Pancho and his Papacito tramped from one meadow to the next, looking for their lost burro. The sun was high in the sky before Little Pancho finally spied Wrong-Way Juan grazing happily in the middle of a distant field.

It took only a minute to catch the animal, and in the next minute, Papacito had thrown himself onto Wrong-Way's back, because he had no intention of walking any more than he had to.

Just then a scream of fright filled the air and Little Pancho and Papacito looked up in surprise to see a group of picnickers running towards them from across the field, closely pursued by a huge bull.

"Look out for the bool!" one of the men shouted in warning.

"Do not be afraid," Little Pancho assured him. "My father ees the greatest bool fighter in all of Chivilvania. He will save you!"

"No, no!" Papacito hissed, knowing too well that he was not the bravest bull fighter in all of Chivilvania, but the most cowardly! "Stop talking, and let us run, too!"

"But . . ." Little Pancho started to protest. "Stop talking and run, I say."

At the word "stop," Wrong-Way pricked up his ears and galloped forward briskly!

Papacito bounced up and down on the burro's back, clinging desperately to his mane. "Ai-eel!" he shouted with alarm. "You are heading right for the bool, you fool! Go the other way! Go-go-go!"

At the word "go," Wrong-Way immediately stopped, sending Papacito flying through the air right towards the bull!

Frantically groping for something to check his flight, Papacito chanced to grasp the bull's horns. Before the bull knew what was happening, he had stumbled to the ground as Papacito fell across his neck.

"Magnificent!" one of the men shouted with admiration as the bull scrambled to its feet and wobbled off into the woods. "I have seen cowboys do the same thing with cows in American movies, but never have I seen a bool conquered like that before!"

"And you would not have seen it today," Papacito panted, "if I had not been riding a most unusual animal."

Little Pancho led the way out of the meadow, whispering, "Stop-a-long now, Wrong-Way. Let us not be getting home!"
